

BURGLARS UNABLE TO PRY OPEN SAFE CONTAINING $1,000

Knock Combination Off Traass Grocery Store Box but Door Remains Shut

Burglars were frustrated in an attempt to force open the safe at the Peter Traass Grocery company, 521 College ave., late Sunday night or early Monday morning when the door failed to open after the combination had been pried off. Approximately $1,000 was in the safe, it was said. Police have taken pictures of finger prints and detectives are investigating.

The attempted burglary was discovered by Henry Tillman, a member of the firm, when he opened the store at 6:45 Monday morning. Mr. Tillman had been in the store on Sunday morning and nothing had been disturbed at that time.

The burglars seemed intent to the store by lifting out an iron grate in the rear of the building and forcing to open a small window which led to the basement. They reached the store room in back of the store proper by tearing a trap door which led up from the basement. From the store room entrance was made to the store proper by breaking open a door which was fastened with six large locks.

Two large sledgeshammers and an iron crowbar, just which had been used to pry the combination off the door were found on the floor Monday morning by Mr. Tillman. The burglars had pried off the combination but were balked in their efforts to open the safe when they were unable to force the locks which held the door. A safe deposit box was found in the morning to one of the doors.

The burglars had prepared a way to escape in case they were seized at their work by opening three rear doors. These doors still were open Monday morning.

The cash register in the bookkeeping cabinet was disturbed but nothing else was disturbed.

CITY WILL BE MEMBER IN MUNICIPALITY LEAGUE

Appleton again will become a member of the League of Women's Municipalities according to Mayor A. C. Rue. He is in receipt of a letter from the league headquarters notifying the city that dues for the coming year will be accepted. Dues this year are technically the same as in previous years though the league has a request that all cities that can afford it feel they have received some good from the organization—dues are usual fee.

The league is mainly concerned with the equitable distribution of tax revenues for cities and villages and is trying to obtain legislation of this kind. Last year little was accomplished, according to Mayor Rue, but because Appleton is interested in the problem he feels that no harm will be caused by remaining in the league.

Take regular daily exercises. Walk to and from work if possible. Spend as much time out of doors as you can.

Put in regular hours of sleep and see that you get plenty of it.

Keep your feet dry. If they get wet put on dry shoes and stockings.

Get plenty of fresh air. A hot foot bath when the feet have been wet or chilled will often ward off a cold.

When colds are prevalent, avoid crowded public places as much as possible.

Do not get the direct breath from persons who have colds they should not have.

Project so; by covering the mouth with a handkerchief when they cough or sneeze.

Wash your hands frequently, avoid putting your fingers in your mouth or nose.

Keep the mouth, nose and throat clean. Gargle the throat with warm salt water, especially after having been in a theater or other crowded public place.

Follow these rules, say the doctors, and you can laugh at the weather.

WISCONSIN WEATHER

Promised rain turning to snow tonight and Tuesday; colder Tuesday, and in north and west portion tonight.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

A high pressure area overides the south Atlantic coast this morning, with low temperatures over the eastern states. An active and fairly deep low pressure area is developing over the central plains states, with cloudy weather and high temperatures over the central states and snows along the northern tier of states and in Canada. This is moving eastward and should cause cloudy weather, probably with rain turning to snow, in this section tonight and Tuesday. High pressure overides the Canadian northwest with low temperatures, and this should spread its influence to this section, closely followed the low, with falling temperatures.

Fox River Canal Building Explained By John D. Lawe

The impression of "many of the present generation that the United States government was the original builder of the canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin rivers and of the locks and dams on the Fox river" is erroneous, according to a statement by John D. Lawe of Kaukauna in a recent issue of the Green Bay Historical Society bulletin.

Mr. Lawe is a grandson of Judge John Lawe, a prominent fur trader of Green Bay from 1794 to 1848, and for a part of that time judge of the Brown county court.

It was discovered early in the growth of the country that improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers would be of vital importance in the development of this region, and a movement was begun looking toward this development. The Hon. Morgan L. Martin, then representing this territory in Congress, was instrumental in securing the passage of an act by the United States legislature granting to Wisconsin certain tracts on either side of the Fox and of the canal at Portage to aid in carrying out the improvement. This was to go into effect upon Wisconsin's admission as a state.

CITIZENS GET BUSY

Ten years later the grant was accepted, and the work begun, but since the constitution of Wisconsin forbids the creation of debt for internal improvements, the work had to be paid for by the sale of public lands, which were very slow. After having expended about $301,359 upon the work, Mr. Lawe says, and about $128,000 on other projects, the state resolved to abandon the whole improvement.

A number of public spirited citizens, however, impressed with the importance of the development, and anxious to see the work put through, organized an association which would see the work put through if it were assured that this could be done without sacri-

Purchase of the machine was approved by the water commission at its meeting on Nov. 16.

STUDENTS EARN WAY THROUGH SCHOOL AS HIRED DANCE ESCORTS

William Klessling, Jefferson, a graduate of Lawrence college with the class of 1924 and now attending law school at the University of Wisconsin is one of the originators of a new business described in a recent issue of a Madison paper. Klessling and another student are advertising their services as "professional escorts for dances, as bridge partners, or what have you."

The two men have found success in the venture which was started when they were referred by the university employment bureau to a girl who wanted to learn to dance. They thought there might be others in need of partners and decided to capitalize on this demand.

LAWE-ST OPENED FOR USE BY BIG TRUCKS

Paving Contractors Say Bituminous Pavement Is Able to Stand Hard Usage

Warning signs on Lawe-st against heavy motor traffic will be removed immediately following protest by Warren Brothers paving contractors, that the signs were misleading and unnecessary. It is said that several times within the last few weeks the contractors have been informed that other municipalities did not care to use their pavement because it could not stand heavy traffic and cited Appleton as an example.

Following positive guarantee that no trains will injure the bituminous paving laid on Lawe-st, city officials consented to remove the signs which were placed there early this fall to keep heavy moving trucks off the street. At the same time signs were placed on Rankin-st and Meade-st which were paved with sheet asphalt. These signs will remain as they are.

The ban on heavy traffic over the Pacificfest bridge also may be lifted if the city engineer finds the structure capable of carrying heavy trucks. Action on this matter was started after a valley manufacturing company protested that its trucks were barred though heavier vehicles not in the same class were permitted to use the street. The test is also being made in view of the fact that more traffic will be directed over the bridge next summer when Wisconsin Ave is paved.

W. B. Basque, agent for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, returned Monday morning from Green Lake where he was called Saturday night by the illness of his 86-year-old mother. Mr. Basque said his mother had improved rapidly under the doctor's care.

The test is also being made in view of the fact that more traffic will be directed over the bridge next summer when Wisconsin Ave is paved.

W. B. Basque, agent for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, returned Monday morning from Green Lake where he was called Saturday night by the illness of his 86-year-old mother. Mr. Basque said his mother had improved rapidly under the doctor's care.

Following positive guarantee that no trains will injure the bituminous paving laid on Lawe-st, city officials consented to remove the signs which were placed there early this fall to keep heavy moving trucks off the street. At the same time signs were placed on Rankin-st and Meade-st which were paved with sheet asphalt. These signs will remain as they are.

The ban on heavy traffic over the Pacificfest bridge also may be lifted if the city engineer finds the structure capable of carrying heavy trucks. Action on this matter was started after a valley manufacturing company protested that its trucks were barred though heavier vehicles not in the same class were permitted to use the street. The test is also being made in view of

WARN RURAL SCHOOLS TO KEEP OUT PEDDLERS

Circulars are being issued this week by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools to all rural schools which will enable them to make donations in the campaign for funds conducted by the Salvation Army.

The teachers are warned, in the same circulars, against allowing agents, collectors or salesmen to take up part of the school time. Mr. Meat-ing names for children has been solved—and the answer comes from A. G. Koch, county registrar of deeds. In examining a set of books recorded between the year 1860 and 1919 Mr. Koch found some names which he says, are original, to say the least. Mr. Koch said these names may be used without crediting him and he says that any parents who are at a loss for a name for their children may have free access to the books in an attempt to find a suitable cognomen. Following are some of the names which Mr. Koch found in the one book:

Zelotica, Eunisa, Iyarr, Hosea, Arville, Narciss, Merance, Ecchia, Calphuria, Lepoldine, Liverius and Thankful.

Variety Of Questions Are Asked Reference Librarian

Teachers, students, members of study clubs, business men and women, housewives—all come to Miss Mary DeJong, reference librarian of Appleton public library, for information regarding their varied problems.

How to trace the derivation of the word "school," examples of Greek architecture in Appleton, how to care for trees, names and number of the coal tar products and a speech given by a former mayor of Appleton are some of the queries made by students, according to the selected list of questions tabulated by Miss DeJong during the year.

Racial composition of Appleton and the contribution to the progress of the city by each foreign element, bibliographies of various fields, number of persons in the musical profession, in the criminal class, and what the United States has done for peace since the Spanish-American war are examples of the questions asked by teachers.

Queries from the general public are varied. How to destroy moths, list of factories in Appleton, a quotation that would be a tribute to women, available undeveloped water-power in Wisconsin and Minnesota, a picture of the staff of Ascalpulus, American of Black Creek; John Diedrich of Vandenbroek and Arnold Krueger of Maple Creek.

2,200 EXAMINATIONS OF RURAL CHILDREN

County Nurse Reports to Supervisors on Year's Work in Country Districts

A total of 1,538 rural school pupils were given complete examinations and 612 were partially examined during the past year by Miss Marie Klein, county nurse, according to her annual report presented to the county board. Of this number 573 had teeth defects; 110 tonsil defects; 38 vision defects; 4 extreme hearing defects; 22 skin diseases; 7 speech defects.

History and travel, literature, special and technical questions, current topics, are the fields that receive the largest number of questions, according to library statistics.

Street department employees are expected to complete late fall work this week and then will prepare for winter. Catch basins were cleaned last week. Graveling of seven streets which was started several days ago and halted by rains last week, has reached a point where the entire project will be completed if favorable weather continues.

Miss Klein made 88 complete inspections, her report shows. Because of indications of acute illness 26 children were excluded from school. The nurse also assisted at 15 pre-school orthopedic and chest clinics during the year.

Miss Klein made 274 home calls for investigations. These investigations were on communicable diseases, correction of defects, child welfare, mothers' pension and other causes. A total of 487 people were interviewed and 987 letters of advice and suggestion were mailed.

CHRISTMAS SAVERS TO GET $134,000

Banks Getting Ready to Distribute Money to Large Army of Depositors

A total of approximately $134,000 deposited in Appleton banks by 2,550 persons will be released within the next few days for Christmas shopping purposes. The money now in the Christmas savings funds of the four city banks has been accumulated by weekly or monthly savings since the first of the year.

An average of $52.50 will be paid every person who looked forward to this year's Christmas shopping appropriation. The total fund would buy a $6.10 present for everyone in the city, estimating the present population at 22,000 persons.

If the money could be converted into one dollar bills they would extend from Menasha almost to Kaukauna, while a good many housewives and Scotchmen might make them go even farther. And if the sum were all used for candy and ice cream Appleton kiddies would be able to treat themselves for many months.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Vance demonstrates by measurements at the scene of the shooting that the murder must have been approximately six feet tall, and thus eliminates Miss St. Clair as a suspect after her handbag has been found in the room with the murdered man.

Pfyfe tells Markham that Leacock had threatened to kill Alvin Benson.

Markham begins to think Leacock guilty. He talks to Ostrander in an effort to learn something more about Benson's friends.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

Vance, however, did not appear disengaged. He dwelt on Captain Le-cock's character, and seemed particularly interested in his personal relationship with Benson. Pfye's gambling propensities also occupied his attention, and he let the colonel ramble on tiresomely about the man's gambling house on Long Island and his hunting experiences in South Africa. He asked numerous questions about Benson's other friends, but paid scant attention to the answers.

The whole interview impressed me as pointless, and I could not help wondering what Vance hoped to learn.

Markham, I am convinced, was equally at sea. He pretended police interest, and nodded appreciatively during the colonel's incredibly drawn-out periods; but his eyes wandered occasionally, and several times I saw him give Vance a look of reproachful inquiry. There was no doubt, however, that Colonel Ostrander knew his people.

When we were back in the district attorney's office, having taken leave of our garrulous guest at the subway entrance, Vance threw himself into one of the easy chairs with an air of satisfaction.

"Most entertain', what? As an eliminator of suspects the Colonel has his good points."

"Eliminator?" retorted Markham.

"It's a good thing he's not connected with the police: he'd have half the community jailed for shooting Benson."

"He is a bit blood-thirsty," Vance admitted. "He determined to get somebody jailed for the crime."

"According to that old warrior, Benson's coterie was a company of gunmen—not forgetting the women. I couldn't help getting the impression, as he talked, that Benson was miraculously lucky not to have been rid with bullets long ago."

"It's obvious," commented Vance, "that you overlooked the illuminating flashes in the Colonel's thunder."

"Were there any?" Markham asked. "At any rate, I can't say that they exactly blinded me by their brilliance."

"And you received no solace from his words?"

"Only those in which he bade me a fond farewell. The parting didn't exactly break my heart. . . . What the old boy said about Leacock, however, might be called a confirmatory opinion. It verified—if verification had been necessary—the case against the Captain."

Vance smiled cynically.

"Oh, to be sure. And what he said about Miss St. Clair would have verified the case against her, too—last Saturday.—Also, what he said about Pfye would have verified the case against Beau Sabreur, if you had happened to suspect him—eh, what?"

Vance had scarcely finished speaking when Swacker came into say that Emery from the homicide bureau had been sent over by Heath, and wished, if possible, to see the district attorney.

When the man entered I recognized him at once as the detective who had found the cigaret butts in Benson's grate.

With a quick glance at Vance and me, he went directly to Markham.

"We've found the gray Cadillac, sir; and Sergeant Heath thought you might want to know about it right away. It was in a small, one-man garage on Seventy-fourth street near Amsterdam avenue, and has been there three days.

"One of the men from the Sixty-eighth street station located it and phoned in to headquarters; and I hopped up town at once. It's the right car—fishing-tackle and all, except for the rods: so I guess the ones found in Central Park belonged to the car after all: tell out probably. . . . It seems a fellow drove the car into the garage about noon last Friday, and gave the garage-man $20 to keep him shut. The man's a keeper, and says he don't read the papers. Anyway, he came across pronto, when I put the screws on."

The detective drew out a small notebook.

"I looked up the car's number. . . . It's listed in the name of Leander Pfye, 24 Elm boulevard, Port Washington, Long Island."

Markham received this piece of unexpected information with a perplexed frown. He dismissed Emery almost curtly, and sat tapping thoughtfully on his desk.

Vance watched him with an amused smile.

"It's really not a madhouse, you know," he observed comfortingly. "I say, don't the Colonel's words bring you any cheer, now that you know Leander was hovering about the neighborhood at the time Benson was transplanted into the Beyond?"

"Damn your old Colonel!" snapped Markham. "What interests me at present is fitting this new development into the situation."

"It fits beautifully," Vance told him. "It rounds out the mosaic, so to speak. . . . Are you actually so converted by learning that Pfye was the owner of the mysterious car?"

"Not having your gift of clairvoyance, I am. I confess, disturbed by the fact."

Markham lit a cigar—an indication of worry.

"You, of course," he added, with sarcasm, "knew before Emery came here that it was Pfye's car."

"I didn't know," Vance corrected him; "but I had a strong suspicion. Pfye overdid his distress when he told us of his breakdown in the Cats-kills. And Heath's question about his injury annoyed him frightfully. His banter was too inadmissible."

"Your ex post facto wisdom is most useful!"

Markham smoked a while in silence.

"I think I'll find out about this matter."

He rained for Swacker.

"Call up the Ansonia," he ordered angrily. "Locate Pfye, and say I want to see him at the Stuyvesant Club at 6 o'clock. And tell him he's to be there."

"It occurs to me," said Markham, when Swacker had gone, "that this car episode may prove helpful, after all. Pfye was evidently in New York that night, and for some reason he didn't want it known."

"Why, I wonder? He tipped us off about Leacock's threat against Benson, and hinted strongly that we'd better get on the fellow's track. Of course, he may have been sore at Leacock for winning Miss St. Clair away from his friend, and taken this means of wreaking a little vengeance on him. On the other hand, if Pfye was at Benson's house the night of the murder, he may have some real information. And now that we've found out about the car, I think we'll tell us what he knows."

"He'll tell you something anyway," said Vance. "He's the type of congenital liar that'll tell anybody anything as long as it doesn't involve himself unpleasantly."

"You and Cumacan Sibyl, I presume, could inform me in advance what he's going to tell me."

"I couldn't say as to the Cumacan Sibyl, don't you know?" Vance returned lightly; "but speaking for myself, I rather fancy he'll tell you that he saw the impetuous Captain at Benson's house that night."

Markham laughed.

"I hope he does. You'll want to be on hand to hear him, I suppose."

"I couldn't bear to miss it."

Vance was already at the door, preparatory to going, when he turned again to Markham.

"I've another slight favor to ask. Get a report on Pfye—there's a good fellow. Send one of your innumerable Dogberry's to Port Washington and have the gentlemen's conduct and social habits looked into."

"Tell you emmis'ry to concentrate on the woman question. . . . I promise you, you shan't regret it."

Markham could see, was decidedly puzzled by this request, and half inclined to refuse it. But after deliberating a few moments, he smiled, and pressed a button on his desk.

"Anything to humor you," he said.

"I'll send a man down at one."

NOT ALL WHO ASK FOR CITY'S HELP GET IT

Poor Commissioner Points Out How Investigation Alters Situations

When is a poor case not a poor case?

This question is before the city poor department several times every month. Last week it again was necessary to settle the question when a young man and his wife appeared before the poor commissioner and told him of their plight.

Facts of the case were that they were being forced to vacate their home because of inability to pay rent; the husband had just recently lost his job when his wages were garnished by persons to whom he owed money and the wife was expected to become a mother within a short time.

Investigation by the department revealed that the husband owned a number of bills in the city and that he had made little or no effort to pay any of them. It also was brought out that the wife before her marriage was a member of a family that had been receiving aid from the city and there was reason to believe that the young man had been living off the city then.

The couple was advised that, because of the wife's condition it might be that eviction was illegal and that the matter should be taken up with the district attorney's office. If he could not help they were told to pack their possessions and live with the wife's family until conditions improved.

STAGE And SCREEN

ERSTWHILE ARMY-NAVY BOYS NOW SAILING UP

Avgation, now the greatest popularity, has its comedy possibilities exploited for the first time in a motion picture by Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're in the Air," the Paramount film which comes to Fischer's Appleton Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Against their will, Beery and Hatton have been soldiers, sailors and firemen, and now they are aviators though no doing of their own. They land in the air service when their employer enlists and they wander into a propeller testing room and have their Scotch highlander costumes blown off.

Some one tosses them a pair of flying uniforms and before they know it they have been mistaken for aviators and are in the air. Mistaken identity dominates the plot. Louise Brooks plays a dual role. She is both of twin sisters, one of whom is of French fealty and the other German. Beery falls in love with the German twin and Hatton with the French, but they are unable to tell the girls apart, so all sorts of scrambled complications ensue.

Then Beery and Hatton are mistaken for German heroes, and are acclaimed of the same status by the French. This is too good to last however, and they are about to be finished off by a flying squad when the war ends, and each wins the twin of his choice.

The picture is replete in thrilling aviation situations, but most of the comedy takes place on the ground. Clever gags punctuate the entire production and the picture may be safely said to be the funniest and best Hatton and Beery have done yet.

Frank Strayer directed "Now We're in the Air," and the cast includes Malcolm Waite, Emile Chautard, Duke Martin and Russell Simpson.

Wisconsin Showing More Interest In Humane Work

MADISON—(AP)—An increased interest in humane work has been evidenced since the publication of the first report of that division, according to O. A. Stolen, state humane agent.

"Much credit," Mr. Stolen says, "is due newspapers of the state which have carried stories dealing with humane work."

Many counties are having their annual meetings this month, Mr. Stolen says. The Washington County Society, which contains some of the veterans of the humane movement in the state met Nov. 2. On the evening of the same date, the Dane-co organization met to receive reports of the annual convention of the nation association.

On Nov. 5 the Jefferson society had a meeting.

Due in large measure to the secretary, Mrs. Bertha Field of Watertown, the humane movement has been very successful in Jefferson co., he says. The Winnebago county society which had been dormant and without a human officer for a year has had two meetings and L. E. Ransom of Oshkosh has been elected humane officer.

SHELTER ANIMALS

When cold weather sets in one of the principal duties of the county humane officers will be to see that horses, cattle and other farm animals are properly sheltered against the cold. Any person who fails to provide any domestic animal or fowl with necessary feed, water, and shelter is guilty of a crime, Mr. Stolen says, and upon conviction may be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not to exceed six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

are not adequate shelter. Horses tied out should be blanketed. Wisconsin has more good dairy barns than any state in the Union, but sometimes they are not large enough for the stock or hand Wisconsin dairymen as a rule take the best care of their stock, but there are exceptions in all the counties. Some farmers are unable to build the new dairy barn. That is especially true in the northern counties where new settlers with more ambition than money are trying to "hew a farm home out of the wilderness."

Humane officers should be reasonable in the construction of this law. Mr. Stolen believes, and should use moral suasion rather than criminal variants, but they must be firm and unyielding wherever it is manifest that the animals are suffering.

The Wisconsin Humane Society at Milwaukee, with W. J. Detleff as superintendent, is doing excellent work. Mr. Stolen says Mr. Detleff inspects practically every car or live stock shipped into Milwaukee, including poultry, and has done much to educate shippers into complying with the law in regard to overcrowding, separating different classes of stock, and providing protection in cold weather.

Samples of complaints coming to the state agent are: In one case while one boy held a dog down to the ground

"Good care, proper food, and adequate shelter for farm animals return big dividends to the owner, and humane agents are rendering a real service when they insist on compliance with the law. Whereas in such cases law enforcement not only prevents cruelty to dumb animals, but also actually benefits their owner. Humane officers should be especially diligent in the performance of their duties."

While Coe's college fast eleven was burying Beloit's cripplers under a 74-0 score, much worse than Carleton's win over Lawrence, Saturday in a Midwest conference game, Cornell of Mount Vernon, Iowa, cinched the 1927 conference banner by a hard-fought 7-0 win over Carleton of Northfield, Minn. The Carletonians and the Cornell eleven were the only unbeaten conference elevens before the game.

Cook, Cornell half back, after a blocked kick on Carleton's 16-yard line in the first quarter, swept around his right end behind perfect interference for the only touchdown of the game. Capt. Wilson, Cornell end, displayed one of the greatest defensive games of his career. Cook was a leading factor in the Cornell victory.

At Cedar Rapids, Coe swamped Beloit, 74 to 0, in its final football game of the season. Coe functioned perfectly to roll up one touchdown after another. Smith, Coe pilot, scored four touchdowns and place and drop kicked for eight points after touchdowns. Ed Barrow, Frisbee and Schrader scored two touchdowns apiece, while Werniment took one over. Ed Barrow's run of 80 yards around end and Capt. Smith's interception of a pass and run of 50 yards were the high lights of the game. Both runs netted scores. Beloit made but four first downs. Coe sent in its second and third teams toward the close of the game.

MEANWELL PUSHES BADGER FIVE HARD

Loss of Veteran Material Hurts Cards; First Game Dec. 10

MADISON—Faced with a dearth of veteran material and two stars of the last winter quiet, namely Kowalewski and Miller, Coach "Doc" Meanwell of the Badger cage squad is pushing his unit at top speed to set them in shape for the opener on Dec. 10 with Coe College.

Wisconsin's producer of Big Ten champs on the hardwood will undoubtedly again be faced with the problem of going through a conference season with a pony quiet. For the forwards, Captain Louis Behr and Charles Andrews, and Rockford Illinois twins will undoubtedly carry the burden of sharpshooting. Both these youngsters have always been among the high scorers of the Big Ten, but their diminutive stature and light weight wears them down the season is over.

Ray Ellerman, a member of the squad last winter is also available and will see some action. Among the bright spots of the sophomores material is "Matty" Matussen. A bundle of fight and energy, this sophomore from Chicago will give them all a fight for the forward berth. Small, but aggressive and quick to learn, Matussen will be heard from ere the season is long underway.

For centers, Meanwell has Elmer Tenhopen and "Bud" Foster, the latter a sophomore. Tenhopen will be just getting into the swing of the Wisconsin style of play last winter and should be a valuable man this year. His height will help his tiny mates to get the top off. Foster is a husky youngster and will get into action aplenty. A fine eye and natural ability under the hoop will help Foster.

The guard problem is a real task for the Badger coach. George Nelson, who played forward for the Badgers on the Varsity is being worked at guard and looks well. Johnny Doyle another holdover from last year is teaming with Nelson and coming along nicely. Jim Murphy, another holdover, and Ed Tidie, sophomore, having had time from South Bend, Indiana, are the remainder of the hopes.

Additional help in the rear guard comes from George Hirschfeld and Mike Welsh, at present members of the grid squad. Hirschfeld, a sophomore, and Welsh, a junior, are coming along nicely. A fine eye and natural ability under the hoop will help Foster.

Many an All-American football candidate is often overlooked simply because the college he attends lacks national prestige.

Recently in discussing this phase of football, I stressed the fact that geographical location had much to do with putting a star over in a big way.

Athletes attending a college located close to the biggest cities of the United States unquestionably have a much better chance to become famous.

I offered Spears of Vanderbilt as an example of a truly great player who was being lost in the shuffle, simply because he was playing in a southern city, far removed from the big news centers.

With the standard of excellence generally existing, it is still an easy matter to pick up some star simply because he is playing on a college team but little known nationally.

No football writer can see over 10 names during the season, therefore in passing judgment on all sections of the country, he must be guided by expert advice.

Recently I received a mighty interesting letter from one of the leading football authorities of Texas, giving me some mighty interesting and valuable data on the grid game in his section.

While they have played mighty good football in Texas for years, several of the leading elevens are for the first time receiving the consideration due them.

My Texas operative for whom I have the greatest respect relative to the ability of players and teams, writes me thusly:

"There was ever an All-American football player, Joel Hunt of the Texas Aggies is that person. He is the greatest player that Lone Star state has ever turned out and don't forget him."

He is the All-American selection of other years, noted from this state."

Joel Hunt is a better player than McMillan. I am willing to go on record as saying that no All-American would be complete without him."

"Stop Joel Hunt was the slogan of Southern Methodist University, that was chanted for a regular."

It's a wise old adage that says, "A man is only as tall as his mother." Well, the mother of the Aggies is the same as the mother of the Badgers.

All Claims for Adjusted Compensation Must Be Made Before January 1

Jan. 1, 1928 is the final date for veterans of the World war to file application for the adjusted service certificate or Federal bonus, according to a notice received this week by C. Baetz, commander of Onay Johnston post, from the regional manager, United States Veterans' Bureau, Milwaukee. This date also applies to dependents of ex-service men who died before filing their application. Commander Baetz has been asked to emphasize the importance of the notice to his post members.

Very honorary discharged World war veteran who served between April 6, 1917 and Nov. 11, 1918, and the dependents of those men who have died, are entitled to the benefits under the adjusted compensation act, commonly known as the bonus bill. These benefits vary in amounts depending upon the character and length of service rendered, and in the average case result in twenty year endowment insurance policies with a face value of approximately $1,000. If the veteran died before making application, the benefits are payable in cash to the dependents. These benefits are given without cost as additional compensation above the war pay for service rendered. Unless application is made for these benefits before Jan. 1928, all rights are forfeited.

Full information may be obtained of the United States Veterans' Bureau, 137 2nd Street, Milwaukee, the American Red Cross, and the American Legion posts.

AWAIT WARM WEATHER TO COMPLETE WATER MAINS

A few days of warmer weather is awaited by the Appleton water commission and contractors who will lay the last 750 feet of water mains on E. Harrison-st and S. Tellulah-ave. The work is to be done by hand in the belief that the project is too small for a trench digger. When the project is completed it will be the end of street waterworks improvements for the year.

The young forest rangers, who had lost their outfit in the fire, were invited to remain as long as they chose, as Paul's guests. Later in the evening, Sue Varden and Tom McNally stepped outside to look at the rising moon. What they saw thrilled them. On a high, bare ridge, clearly beheld against the huge disk of the golden moon, stood the albino buck.

The animals had run off the concrete, but one of the number darted back directly in the path of the car which contained Mr. and Mrs. Poppy and Miss Delta Starks. The horse was knocked down, receiving several broken ribs and internal injuries. Mr. Poppy suffered a deep gash on his nose and ear and a severely cut temple, necessitating several stitches. Mrs. Poppy was badly cut on the face and also suffered severe bruises in the legs. Miss Starks was uninjured. Donald Barlow and Daniel Redman of this city who passed soon after the accident, brought the occupants of the car to the office of a local physician.

While enroute to the home of their son, Walter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDermott narrowly escaped serious injury about 5:30 Sunday evening when the horse and buggy in which they were riding was struck by an auto coming out of the Menzie Shoe Co. yard. The buggy was provided with a signal lantern, according to Mr. McDermott, but for some reason was not observed by the driver of the car, whose name was not learned. Mrs. McDermott was thrown over the dashboard of the buggy but escaped with only a few minor bruises about the neck and shoulders. Mrs. McDermott was taken to her son's home by the driver of the car and was later removed to her own home at the C. and N. W. and G. B. and W. Junction. REVIEW BOOK BY FERBER IN LONDON NEWS

A review of Edna Ferber's "Show Boat," which appeared in American book markets months ago, appeared in the Sept. 3 issue of the Illustrated London News, published in London, England.

"The novel-reading public must be deeply grateful to Miss Ferber for reviving the memory of an America not yet surfeited with prohibition and prosperity," according to the English review. "Edna Ferber carries the analogy between the flowing spirit of Magnolia, Tennessee, and the Mississippi just far enough to open to you the soul of the woman. The book pulses with life, and it is radiant with colour. Yet the life and colour emanate from Magnolia, and when her elvish daughter, Kim, is confronted with the Mississippi of her mother's stories, she sees only a yellow waste of waters. There was no Mississippi in Kim, no barnstorming joy, no passion for the roving show boat with its Dickensian cargo of actors and actresses. 'Show Boat' is a captivating romance, the review stated.

"AMNESIA" VICTIM ESCAPES FROM JAIL

Slips Away When He Is Detained to Clean Grounds About Institution

Ray W. Abbot of Duluth, Minn., who was held at the county jail here since early last week when he was picked up by a deputy sheriff escaped Saturday. Sheriff Otto Zuehlke had detailed Abbot to clean up the grounds about the jail and he slipped away when unobserved. Abbot was taken to jail because he was believed to be suffering from amnesia.

Cards in his pocket bore the name of Ray W. Abbot of Duluth, Minn., and inquiries in that city established that a man by that name had been committed to an insane hospital in Pergis Falls, Minn., in 1925. The officials of the hospital agreed to take Abbot back if Outagamie-co would pay his transportation expenses. County officials here did not feel the county should be obliged to stand the expense of sending him back.

No attempt to locate Abbot will be made by Sheriff Zuehlke, he said Monday, because there are no charges against the man and the county has no authority to hold him.

FISHERMEN ORGANIZE TO PROTECT RIGHTS

Sigman Elected Counsel and Extension Director of New Organization

Organization of the Wisconsin Federation of Commercial Fishermen was completed at a meeting of commercial fishermen residing along Lake Michigan, at Two Rivers, Saturday evening. Fishermen from the northern lake district and Green Bay were unable to attend the meeting because of a severe snowstorm which prohibited travel. Move to extend the federation to that region will be taken within the next few weeks.

The preamble of the new organization states that "whereas, it has been fully demonstrated by experience that unity of action and organization among working people are imperative and essential in order to combat the ever-growing encroachment of organized detriment to the interest of commercial fishermen, and as there are many questions which cannot be dealt with successfully by the individual fishermen, and, as their solution can best be obtained by co-operation and organization among the fishermen, therefore all fishermen interested in promoting their own welfare of their fellow fishermen engaged in commercial fishing, should unite and join in a brotherhood of fishermen, known as the Wisconsin Federation of Commercial Fishermen."

About 100 fishermen from Milwaukee, Kenosha, Port Washington, Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Two Rivers were present when the meeting was called to order and listened to an address of welcome by a representative of the Two Rivers fishermen's association.

Following the greeting Congressman George J. Schneider addressed the gathering on the need of organization citing the good which other groups as labor and industry had derived.

He said that organization was the only way in which the fishermen could expect to accomplish anything.

Congressman Schneider was followed by A. W. Icks, representing the state conservation commission, who addressed the meeting on the cooperation that could be expected from the group he represented.

Icks stated that the commission was willing at all times to give thorough consideration to every complaint or need of the fishermen.

After the speeches the meeting went into session to incorporate the articles and bylaws of a constitution.

Each fishing boat, it was agreed, would be considered the unit of membership.

At the election William Braeger, Milwaukee, former president of the Wisconsin Fishermen's association was elected president of the federation.

Mike Shipper, Sheboygan, and Everett LaFond, Two Rivers, were elected vice president and secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Board members are the officers and four other fishermen, R. Smith, Sheboygan, O. Smith, Port Washington, Arthur Lueke, Two Rivers and Mr. Chambers.

Glen L. Morris, electrical wizard whose experiments are said to be as interesting as magic, will give an illustrated talk on Electricity.

On Feb. 4, Loring Campbell will present the second program of the series, a mixture of mystery and humor, called Arabian Nights.
